Introduction

There are also 2 variants depending on which livery you are using. All liveries except Stained Glass Refurb utilise Axion, whereas Stained Glass Refurb utilises the newer PIS. For the true Announcement Codes these are identical, though the 'Get Home' Codes differ.

Please ensure you have thoroughly read the main manual before proceeding further, or you will be missing important information required to get the announcements working.

Read on for better understanding.

Axion 'Get Home' Codes

The below destinations are known as 'Get Home' Codes. These will not provide announcements and simply display the end destination. These are not intended to be used in service as they provide no information about the current service or stopping pattern. As such, these disable audible announcements.

These are also to be used for AI services.

PIS 'Get Home' Codes

As with the Axion 'Get Home' Codes, these are to be used on the Stained Glass Refurb, and will again not play any announcements. The input is however different.

In this system they are scrolled through code 1 - 59 upwards. In the top right corner a pop-up message will correlate the PIS Code with the below destinations.

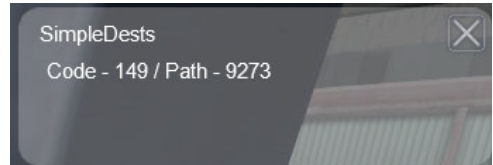

For AI Services just input these codes in the same manner as Axion.

Stopping Patterns Explained

These are the codes that allow your train to play automated announcements, and are only intended for the player train. Using the methods outlined in this and the main manual, apply these to the player train (scenario editor, Axion or PIS scroll).

These announcements are very cleverly scripted, and will not function without having run the external plugin before running TS20XX. This is detailed in the main manual on Page 2.

You will not need to follow the traditional method of playing announcements in TS via markers and lua scripting.

Our very talented developers have poured their time and skill into creating an automated announcement system specifically for the Class 185.

Started from the next page is the list of all possible service patterns available to you.

The input method has been previously explained through the main manual and this for both Axion and PIS scroll, in 'play' and in the scenario editor.
